5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

MATT BURKE, SPORTS EDITOR

Good fortune means a lot in pro football. If the Patriots are fortunate enough to have Rob Gronkowski, Sony Michel and Julian Edelman all close to being 100 percent healthy in January, then the Patriots should be favorites to reach the Super Bowl out of the AFC yet again. But if any one of those three players goes down, it's doubtful that the Pats will be able to put up the points necessary to be able to compete with Kansas City or Pittsburgh in the playoffs. For more on the Patriots, please see Page 13 and metro.us.

1 CA WILDFIRE THAT KILLED 85 FULLY CONTAINED

The deadliest wildfire in California history that destroyed the mountain town of Paradise and killed at least 85 people was 100 percent contained on Sunday, according to state fire officials. The number of people still missing from the Camp Fire north of San Francisco dropped to 249 on Sunday, the Butte County Sheriff's Office said. The number was revised down from 475 as people who were believed missing were found in shelters, staying in hotels or with friends, officials said, adding that many did not know they were on the list. The Camp Fire that started on Nov. 8 destroyed nearly 14,000 homes and burned nearly 154,000 acres (62,000 hectares) — an area five times the size of San Francisco. Searchers will have a few more days of dry weather, but starting late Tuesday, another 2-5 inches (5 to 13 cm) of rain is expected to drop on the Sierra Nevada foothills through next Sunday, hampering the searchers' work and renewing fears of flash floods and mudslides, forecasters said.

2 US-MEXICO BORDER CROSSING CLOSED AFTER PROTEST

The United States closed its busiest border crossing with Mexico on Sunday after Mexican police broke up a protest of Central American migrants massed in Tijuana, scattering some demonstrators toward the border, where U.S. officers hurled gas canisters from the American side. Traffic in both directions was suspended at the San Ysidro port of entry between San Diego and Tijuana, the U.S. Customs and Border Protection agency said on Twitter. U.S. President Donald Trump has raised alarms about a caravan of Central American migrants as it approached the United States, with its members planning to apply for asylum on reaching the United States. Tensions on the border had been rising in recent days, with thousands of migrants camped out in a sports stadium in Tijuana and hundreds periodically gathering near the main border crossing. The migrants have said they would wait there until they could request asylum, despite growing U.S. measures to tighten the border.

3 WINTER SWIMMERS ENJOY THEMSELVES IN ICY WATER

A winter swimming fan dives into the freezing waters of the Songhua River on Nov. 25, 2018, in Harbin, China. Winter swimming is increasingly popular, especially among elderly Chinese, who believe a daily dip in the cold water improves the human immune system.

4 EU AGREES 'BEST POSSIBLE' BREXIT DEAL, BACKS MAY

European Union leaders finally sealed a Brexit deal on Sunday, saying the package agreed with Prime Minister Theresa May was the best Britain will get in a warning to the British parliament not to reject it. "Those who think that, by rejecting the deal, they would get a better deal, will be disappointed," European Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker told reporters after the 27 other E.U. leaders formally endorsed a treaty setting terms for British withdrawal in March and an outline of a future E.U.-U.K. trade pact. Asked whether there was any chance Brussels would reopen the pact if an alliance of pro- and anti-Brexit forces votes it down in the British parliament, Juncker said "this is the best deal possible," although summit chair Donald Tusk sounded more guarded, saying he did not want to consider hypotheticals. May used a post-summit news conference to make a sales pitch for her plan, telling television viewers at home that it was the "only possible deal," offering control of U.K. borders and budgets while maintaining close alignment with E.U. regulations that was good for business and the security of Britain and Europe.

5 'EL CHAPO' TRIAL ENTERS THIRD WEEK

In what can only be described as a telenovela, replete with sobbing jurors demanding to be sent home, NYPD snipers on rooftops and shoes removed before entering the courtroom, the trial of Joaquin "El Chapo" Guzman enters its third week in Federal District Court in Brooklyn. Under tight security by several local, state and federal agencies including the U.S. Marshals Service, the National Guard and Homeland Security, the trial is tantamount to a high-profile terrorism case. The prosecution is scheduled to continue presenting witnesses and evidence of Guzman as the leader of the violent and lucrative Sinaloa drug cartel while the defense will try to prove levels of corruption within the Mexican government. The case is expected to continue through Valentine's Day 2019. TERRY MOSELEY

Is Cyber Monday becoming obsolete?

With more people shopping online year-round, does Cyber Monday still stand apart as having the best deals on the calendar?

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Cyber Monday will be a big shopping holiday, but is it really necessary anymore as consumers shop online throughout the year? GETTY IMAGES

In 2017, Cyber Monday shoppers spent a record $6.59 billion in digital transactions, making it the largest online shopping day in U.S. history.

Cyber Monday 2018 is sure to be a record sales day as well, but with more people turning to online shopping all year round, Cyber Monday may not actually stand apart when it comes to discounts and deals, said Russell Winer, a professor of marketing at New York University.

"Due to Amazon, I think more retailers are offering deals year-round," he said. "People are becoming a little bit skeptical about whether or not you're going to get the best deal on Cyber Monday."

That year-round online shopping also means there's less importance placed on a designated day.

"The importance of any particular day is declining," he said. "People are shopping anytime, anywhere, obviously, and I wouldn't be surprised if, in fact, at some point, Cyber Monday and Black Friday cease to exist."

Both deals and the pressure to snatch up your holiday items quickly are not as tied to one day as they used to be. Instead, people are shopping online over a longer period of time.

"One time, before e-commerce, if you waited until the last minute and had to shop in-store, it was always a big hassle. Stores were really crowded or out of stock." Winer said. "You don't worry about that anymore. You don't have to wait for the Christmas period. You can order in advance and hide [packages] in your house."

The pros and cons of online versus brick-and-mortar shopping have changed as well. Whereas a benefit of shopping in physical stores was once getting your items immediately, that's changed with Amazon's quick (sometimes same-day) shipping, Winer noted.

If you do plan to do some online shopping this Cyber Monday, though, you should be extra-wary of online scams.

"Unfortunately, phishing continues to remain a concern, and email is an important attack vector," said Engin Kirda, a professor of information assurance at Northeastern University.

Slime, tech among 'dangerous toys' to avoid this holiday: Watchdog

The holiday shopping season is in full swing, but dangerous toys like toxic slime and privacy-invading tech could pose a risk to your children, according to watchdog group U.S. PIRG.

U.S. Public Interest Research Group Education Fund (PIRG) recently released its 33rd annual Trouble in Toyland toy safety report, which identifies dangerous toys available during the holiday shopping season.

ISTOCK

The 2018 report found dangers such as toxic amounts of boron, which can cause nausea, "persistent vomiting," diarrhea and other gastrointestinal health issues, according to the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry.

"No one should worry about whether or not the toy they're buying is toxic or dangerous. But in 2018, we're still finding hazards in some of the most popular toys," said Adam Garber, consumer watchdog for U.S. PIRG, in a statement.

U.S. PIRG found six kinds of slime with toxic levels of boron, likely from borax, which is an ingredient listed in many slime kits as an "activator." Along with nausea and vomiting, borax can cause skin irritation and hormone disruption, leading to reproductive health issues.

In July 2016, the Canadian government advised residents to avoid using boric acid (a.k.a. boron or borax) in children's arts and crafts, such as slime. The European Union has a limit on boron concentrations greater than 300 parts per million.

U.S. PIRG identified slime toys with boron concentrations as high as

Slime toys had boron concentrations as high as 4,700 parts per million.

4,700 parts per million. The United States has not established a limit on boron concentrations in children's toys.

U.S. PIRG also is warning parents about smart devices that connect to the internet, which could pose a risk to your child's privacy.

U.S. PIRG points to findings from the Mozilla Foundation that two toys, the Amazon Fire HD Kids Edition and the Dash robot made by Wonder Workshop, did not meet the foundation's minimum privacy and security standards.

Both companies deny that their devices share information with third parties.

Ryan Reynolds voices the fan-favorite Pokemon in the upcoming live-action flick. WARNER BROS. PICTURES

'Detective Pikachu' is a 'fun mystery romp' with 'a lot of heart'

The trailer for the Ryan Reynolds-led flick has taken the internet by storm.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
GregoryWakeman@metro.us

The first trailer for "Detective Pikachu" caused quite a stir when it hit the web last week. So much so that it even rivaled the first look at "Toy Story 4" for attention.

That's because, as Pikachu, Ryan Reynolds looks to have injected wit and humor into the film, which means it will appeal to those who have never even heard of Pokemon as well as its legion of die-hard fans.

Who doesn't love Pikachu?

Over the last few weeks, we've been lucky enough to speak to two individuals who have worked on "Pokemon: Detective Pikachu": actor Ken Watanabe and its screenwriter, Nicole Perlman, who shed some more light on the live-action/animation hybrid.

First, Watanabe discussed his character, Lieutenant Yoshida. "I play a detective who helps the main character of the story. It was fun to watch the Pokemon characters speak internal thoughts that are distinct to humans."

Perlman talked us through her work writing "Detective Pikachu" alongside Rob Letterman, who also directed the film, saying their intention was to give it a mainstream appeal that attracted Pokemon fans and novices.

"It is a fun mystery romp adventure story," insisted Perlman. "It is exactly what you are probably imagining it to be in terms of a great kids' movie that appeals to all ages with its characters," Perlman said. "Like with 'Goosebumps,' Rob Letterman does a great job with taking material and really bringing a lot of heart to it. I think that will be an experience that everyone takes away from it.

"I was really drawn to the world-building elements of it," she added. "I like the challenge of crafting a new world that has potentially a lot of interesting backstory and history, and finding a way to make that cinematic and fun and accessible for people new to the franchise."

We'll get to see what Letterman and Perlman have achieved with "Pokemon: Detective Pikachu" when it hits theaters May 10, 2019.

Americans' holiday shopping plans taxed by trade war

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

In light of the ongoing trade war with China, some Americans are pausing and adding more thought to their holiday shopping plans this year.

Some 93% of Americans said they plan to make purchases this holiday season, according to a new NerdWallet survey, conducted by The Harris Poll, of over 2,000 U.S. adults. Of those, 44% said they will compare prices of products more closely because of the trade war.

American attention is divided

Tariffs have dominated business and economic news throughout 2018.

In an economic back-and-forth between countries, the United States has imposed tariffs on certain products imported from China, such as seafood, furniture, electronics, appliances and cosmetics. China has imposed tariffs on certain products imported from the United States, such as food and vehicles.

About half of Americans are paying close attention — 53% said they are very or somewhat closely following the U.S.-China tariffs/trade war, according to the NerdWallet survey.

But shoppers are taking precautions. Despite this split, some American shoppers will be taking steps to ensure they don't overpay this holiday season.

We asked those who plan to make purchases this holiday season how the tariffs/trade war with China will affect their purchasing (e.g., gifts, food, decorations) from November 2018 through January 2019, and nearly three-quarters (73%) cited some sort of impact.

Consumers may feel the taxes soon

Tariffs will have an impact on prices, although consumers might not notice it quite yet, according to Thomas Prusa, a professor of economics at Rutgers University.

"There is too much trade being subject to tariff to think that American consumers aren't going to feel the effects of this," Prusa says.

Select products, such as home appliances, have already seen higher prices. But there's often a lag between tariff implementation and price increases, so some products that retailers are selling this Black Friday and holiday season won't be affected yet.

Will compare prices of products more closely

22%
Will avoid buying products made in China

19%
Will avoid buying products that are impacted by tariffs

16%
Will buy fewer gifts than they normally would

For those products that are affected, Prusa says the impact may be largely hidden in the prices.

And despite perhaps taking more precautions, Americans won't stop shopping altogether.

"I would say it's probably going to be a good holiday season because the overall economy is strong," Prusa says. "That being said, it probably won't be as good as it might otherwise be because of the higher prices coming from the tariffs."

How to save money

In response to higher prices and in anticipation of potential future price increases, consumers can begin preparing for holiday shopping now.

Here are a few ways to plan ahead and save money:

Build a budget

Write out a holiday shopping budget and give it breathing room, in case some items cost more than you anticipate.

Monitor prices

Keep an eye on the products you're interested in buying well before you plan to shop. Track prices over the next month or two so you can recognize a good sale when you see one.

Earn cash back

When possible, take advantage of cash-back apps like NerdWallet's to earn a percentage of your eligible purchases back.

Take steps after your purchase

Use price-adjustment policies. Many stores will give you money back if the product you purchased goes on sale a week or two after you buy it.

A brief history of Cyber Monday

We explain the story of this relatively new digital "holiday."

PAT KING

GETTY IMAGES

It feels like, as we toss away the decorative dog calendars that we plowed through the year before, we seem to fill up more real estate in those little boxes for new traditions that were not there before — like "holidays" such as Black Friday, Small Business Saturday and the ever-popular Cyber Monday. So what is the story of Cyber Monday, exactly? Let's take a look inside this new seasonal tradition.

The history of Cyber Monday

Originally coined by the senior vice president of the National Retail Federation, Ellen Page, in 2005 in a press release titled "'Cyber Monday' Quickly Becoming One of the Biggest Online Shopping Days of the Year," this tradition was created as a way for companies to persuade customers to shop online on the Monday following Thanksgiving.

Since its inception, Cyber Monday has become one of the biggest shopping days of the year as online retailers offer huge deals to customers in an attempt to extend the spending frenzy from Black Friday through to the next week. Companies like Amazon and Walmart will slash prices on some of the hottest gift items of the season to get people jump-started on scratching off names on their Christmas lists. In the past, items like laptops, gaming systems and clothing have gone down in price to get customers to load up their digital "shopping carts."

The campaign has truly paid off: Shoppers spent $6.59 billion on Cyber Monday in 2017, a considerable jump from $2.98 billion in 2015. What is so appealing about Cyber Monday, compared with Black Friday, is that you can avoid the bloodthirsty frenzy of lining up outside of your local big-box chain in order to score these savings. All it takes are a couple clicks and some mindless scrolling through discounted items to take advantage of these wild savings.

There is speculation that this year could top years past as it was reported that over 250 million shoppers had visited retail websites in 2017 on Black Friday alone, causing both Amazon and Walmart to increase their combined market shares by 1.5%. It's safe to say that not nearly that number of people took time out of their day to visit retail stores on Black Friday in 2017, so these people likely were scoping out the best deals online in order to shop Cyber Monday.

So if the big lines of Black Friday seem, well, a little too much to handle for you on your post-Thanksgiving-hangover recovery day, make sure to log online for Cyber Monday to take advantage of some of the savings!

Even teachers need a helping hand.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

While many teachers have the option for a $250 tax deduction on all of the items they purchase for their classrooms, it has been discovered that the majority of teachers spend well over that amount throughout the school year. In a recent study conducted by the National Center of Education Statistics, they found that teachers spend on average $480 on classroom expenses alone — almost double the amount of help they can legally receive from the government. This can be a terrible strain on most public school teachers, as the national average salary for their position hovers just below $40,000 per year.

This issue gained a lot of steam this year, as many teachers across the country who'd had enough with how little they were compensated for making a meaningful difference in our children's lives decided to go on strike. While these issues have not been resolved by those in charge in Washington, Amazon has stepped in to provide a way to make things a little easier for teachers who are struggling to buy supplies for their classrooms.

By signing up for an Amazon Business for Education account ($179 for up to three people), teachers can take advantage of free shipping from Amazon on purchases over $25. With this plan, teachers can also reap the savings that are normally reserved for Amazon Business members on over 5 million different items. By banding together to create an account, teachers can save both time and money on much-needed items for their classrooms when supplies begin to dwindle.

Another perfect resource for teachers is Discount School Supply. Begun as a small retail chain, Discount School Supply became one of the first full-fledged online destinations for teachers looking to save money on school supplies. With a wide range of items, from standard arts and crafts items to children's furniture, this site offers prices that can be as low as a third of the original price on clearance items that teachers will need year after year.

So while the issue of providing both higher salaries and more of a tax exemption for teachers struggling to pay for school supplies is debated in our country, there are some ways that they can get around dipping into their own wallets too heavily throughout the year.

Big second half powers Patriots

The Pats improved their record to 8-3 on the season with a win over the Jets.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

Sony Michel stiff-arms Darryl Roberts of the Jets on Sunday. JEFF ZELEVANSKY

The Patriots (8-3) didn't stomp over the Jets (3-8) the way most thought they would Sunday at MetLife Stadium, but there were enough positive signs coming out of the game to believe New England can win one of the top two seeds in the AFC during the final month of the regular season. The Pats dominated the Jets in the second half at the Meadowlands in the two teams' first meeting of the year, and ultimately came away with a 27-13 victory.

Here are three things we learned Sunday.

Michel makes a difference

Early in the 2018 season, it was clear that Patriots offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels wanted to create a more balanced offense. The team was fresh off Tom Brady having to do it all in the Super Bowl against the Eagles, and — given Brady's age — it was a mighty good idea to have some sort of backup plan on days Brady was not able to don his Superman cape.

Sony Michel has shown plenty of flashes in his rookie year of giving the Patriots that true type of feature running back they haven't enjoyed since the days of Corey Dillon, but it wasn't until Sunday's win over the Jets that Michel truly came into his own.

Against New York, Michel had the best game of his young pro career so far as he carried the ball 21 times for 133 yards and a touchdown. The former Georgia star also had two catches for 12 yards.

Michel had a nice cut-back for 31 yards to open the second half, and he also did the little things that Bill Belichick appreciates most. Backed up on their own goal line in the first half, the Jets brought the pressure as they looked for a safety. But Michel's five-yard carry quickly put an end to that dread.

Michel also showed his toughness on Sunday after he got contorted into a pretzel by a pair of Jets defenders. After sitting out one series, he stepped back into the backfield early in the fourth quarter and a 33-yard jaunt put him over 100 yards for the day. He also had the Pats' final score of the game, a one-yard touchdown run in the middle of the fourth quarter.

Gronk is alive

The New York Daily News ran a humorous cover this past week with Brady and Belichick holding up a lifeless version of Rob Gronkowski. The headline read "Weak End at Gronkie's," an homage to "Weekend at Bernie's," the story of a dead man that two guys prop up to make look alive (great flick, BTW).

We didn't see the elite version of Gronk on Sunday, but the big tight end certainly factored in to the Pats' victory.

He scored the Patriots' first touchdown of the afternoon when he caught a 34-yard strike from Brady on third-and-12, and he also played the role of a perfect decoy on Julian Edelman's touchdown late in the third quarter. With two Jets defenders keying in on Gronk, Edelman and Brady hooked up on a relatively easy curl route and Edelman was able to plunge into the end zone to break a 13-13 tie.

Gronk finished the game with three catches for 56 yards.

The 'do-your-job' defense

After an embarrassing performance at Tennessee where they allowed 34 points, the Patriots held New York to just 13 points on Sunday. The Patriots defense didn't have to be great on Sunday to beat Josh McCown and company, but the unit also showed flashes that it could have a strong conclusion to the season.

Stephon Gilmore picked off McCown with the Jets threatening, and Deatrich Wise came up with a huge sack on third down early in the fourth quarter to give the ball back to the Pats. The rush defense was outstanding as they held Isaiah Crowell to just 30 yards on six carries.

Aries Information will be revealed. Take caution when dealing with institutions or government agencies. Make sure all your personal documents are in order.

Taurus Look for the path of least resistance. Remember what's happened in the past and make decisions based on what you know and the experiences you've undergone.

Gemini Partnerships will need to be nurtured. It will be difficult to know where you stand given the dialogue you have with someone. Expect pertinent information to be left out.

Cancer Don't limit what you can do when you should be letting your creative imagination run wild. Explore the possibilities and discover what you are capable of doing.

Leo Fill your day with enjoyable activities and people. A shopping spree or an event you've been looking forward to will lift your spirits.

Virgo Keep a close watch over domestic situations that have the potential to spin out of control. Someone may withhold information that would alter your feelings about something.

Libra Emotional matters will cause you to question what someone is telling you or asking you to do. If a change is required, look inward and make self-improvements. Don't try to change others.

Scorpio Getting in touch with an old friend or relative and making plans for upcoming events will lead to travel plans or a conversation that could shape your next move.

Sagittarius Look at the big picture, but don't feel that you must do everything at once. You need to pace yourself to fit your budget, lifestyle and availability.

Capricorn You don't have to make a change just because someone else does. You may need to adjust your plans, but it's still best to do your own thing for your own benefit.

Aquarius Look over contracts, investments and issues you want to adjust before the end of the year. Negotiate on your own behalf. A gift or reward is heading your way.

Pisces Situations will escalate quickly. Don't give in to anger when intelligence is what's required. A steady pace and a carefully considered plan are in your best interest. EUGENIA LAST
